NEXT SERIES: TWINS, by Orhan Ayyüce

Sitting in my 'writing studio' thinking that I have nothing to say, no books to write, no gossipy quarters to spread the word, no invitations from prestigious magazines who publish noteworthy architectural projects and noteworthy opinion pieces written by noteworthy socialites. I am feeling distant to architectural intelligentsia, to the blogs of architectural pornography and utopia du jour of high thinking and talking. I feel like revenge and say; "Kiss my ass." At least I have ideas, attitude and a point of view from my car...

In the School Blogs

Faysal, at Architectural Association, wonders if he should take a screen shot of his work every day or dematerialize the future.

Jesse, at University of Hawaii, is fascinated with the explicit dichotomy between Wall Street's physical manifestation and its actual activity. So he simply turns it inside out. That's the kinda guy he is.

Daniel, at University of Oregon, just found out that he won a competition for designing a conference table for the DesignBridge Community Design/build club on campus and would love to hear some feedback. Congrats, Daniel!

Nick, at UC Berkeley, gives a talk titled "Military Atmospheres" in conjunction with his Branner Traveling Fellowship and opens an exhibition about his travels in 2009. Don't miss it - the exhibition runs through 3/10.

Much more recently posted in the School Blogs.....
